BLOODLINE — LEPLANB SS26

That surf. Kelly. Andy. Lisa Andersen. Roxy. That era is over. The feeling isn't.

There was a moment in surf culture that nobody knew was the peak while it was happening.

Kelly at Pipeline. Andy at Teahupo'o. Lisa Andersen on the cover of Surfer Magazine with the headline "Lisa Andersen surfs better than you." Girls running into the water. Flash. Analog. Salt. Freedom. Brands that felt like belonging to something real.

Then the investors arrived. The malls. The 600 stores. The bankruptcy. The private equity firms.

The culture didn't die. It was sold.

We are not here to bring it back.

We are here to build what comes next. Same energy. Same rawness. Same feeling that made you want to live inside those campaigns. But born in 2026, shot on iPhone and analog and polaroid and digicam, built around people who chose the ocean over the office, freedom over security, and this life over the one everyone expected of them.

That era had Gold Coast. It had Malibu. It had Pipeline.

We have Ericeira.

Every city in the world has its moment.

Paris in the 60s. La Movida in Madrid in the 80s. Brooklyn in the 90s. Byron Bay in the 2000s.

When you're inside it you don't see it. You only understand it later, when the energy is gone and all that's left are the photos, the films and the brands that knew how to capture it.

Ericeira is living its moment right now.

The same village that in ten years everyone will wish they had known in this era. The best waves in Europe. A light that exists nowhere else. A community that chose this life before it was a trend.

We are here now.

And we want the world to know. Not through a press release, not through an ad campaign. Through the clothes, the images and the universe we are building.

The way Banana Republic captured the spirit of adventure. The way The Nude Project built a generation. The way Eme Studios started from a garage in Elche and ended up on every street in Spain.

Our inspo

The ones doing it right now, the way those brands did it then. RVCA - Rhythm - Saturdays NYC - Adanola - Reformation - Sézane - The Nude Project - Eme Studios - Surf Co

THE GAP NOBODY FILLED

Every iconic era needs a brand that owns the place.

Billabong → owned Gold Coast

Jacquemus → owns the south of France

Patagonia → owns Patagonia

Ericeira Surf & Skate → born there in 1996. 23 stores. a shop. Not a universe.

??? → Ericeira

not a campaign.

«this shouldn't feel like a fashion campaign
it should feel like a summer people don't fully get over»

Part of this project will live forever in analog

Some of this is going to feel like a magazine. Some of it is going to feel like someone filmed it without asking. Both are the point.

MUSIC /

«2000s spanish&portuguese summer
